Carol Fukunaga is running for City Council to continue what she started in the state Senate: bringing high-tech, good-paying jobs to Honolulu.

And as an advisor to President Clinton, Carol helped to connect businesses, schools and libraries to the Internet.

On the City Council, Carol will continue to:

- Prepare Honolulu for a knowledge-based, technology-driven global economy
- Lead efforts to speed deployment of high-speed broadband infrastructure in Hawaii

Carol Fukunaga knows the key to Honolulu's future economy is preparing our kids for the high-tech jobs of tomorrow.

That's why Carol Fukunaga fought in the state Senate to create high-tech jobs, and she'll continue fighting as a member of the City Council to help create high-tech jobs.

On the City Council, Carol will continue to:

- Prepare Honolulu for a knowledge-based, technology-driven global economy
- Lead efforts to speed deployment of high-speed broadband infrastructure in Hawaii
